Ã ¢ â € ‡ å "for this is the noble nature of man, that his heart will never be fully in a single passion or tree, or how people call apologies, an idea. In it goes from a devotion to the next, not because it is ashamed of your first love, but because it must be on fire perpetually. To fall for reason, already that our grandmothers, is only a fall of man among his many passionate attempts to find the maids of knowledge and eternal life, both in one. When a nation, or individual, declines the experiences that appear only to passionate hearts, they are automatically finished from the realm of history. The heart of man falls in love with someone or something, or becomes sick. He can never get unoccupied. And the great question for mankind is what is to be loved or hated after, whenever an old love or fear lost your waiting. - Eugen Rosenstock-Huessy Ã ¢ â € œ "I never wanted to be alone, but always opted for solid. I am an emotional, sensitive and expressive creature. I can not desert my feelings, could never control. I fall in love and I can be easily broken. - MF Moonzajer Ã ¢ â € ¬Å "When messed up a bottle of ripe fine wine, what you are drinking is the product of a particular culture and tradition, a certain soil, a particular climate, the climate That year, and the love and work of people who can as long as he died. The wine is still changing, still evolving, so much that no two bottles can be one of them. Until now, things become incredibly complex, almost eternal. Without looking for blasphemema, it became something like the smell and the taste of God. Do you drink alone? Never. The more a bottle, the more you want to share it with others ... and this is the other unbelievable thing about wine, which brings people together, makes them share with each other, laughing at each other The others, fall in love with another and with the world around you. - Neel Burton Ã ¢ â € ¬ â € œName falls falls after people like me They without prove to me as blood in your mouth. I will destroy you as beautiful as possible. And when I leave you finally you will understand, why the storms are named after people. - Caitlyn Siehl Ã ¢ â € Å "One can never" fall "in love, you should rise at the level of conscience.
