Reset rural job policies, recognise women's work

As India emerges from the lockdown, labour market policy has to reverse the pandemic's gender-differentiated impact

By Prachi Mishra

As India emerges from the lockdown, labour market policy has to reverse the pandemic's gender-differentiated impact. The pandemic has disproportionately affected women, who have lost their jobs and income. The government needs to take steps to protect and create jobs for women, especially in the rural sector. This includes providing training, financial support, and flexible work arrangements. It is also important to recognise and value women's work, particularly in the informal sector. The government should implement policies that support women's economic participation and leadership, and ensure that they are not left behind in the recovery process.

Lessons for India

The Indian government's response to the COVID-19 pandemic has been a mix of success and failure. One of the key lessons is the importance of a coordinated and timely response. The government's initial response was slow and uncoordinated, leading to a significant loss of lives and economic damage. A more effective response would have involved a clear strategy, better communication, and stronger collaboration between different levels of government. Another lesson is the need to focus on the most vulnerable populations, particularly in the rural sector. The government should have implemented targeted support measures for these groups, such as providing food, financial aid, and job training. Finally, the pandemic has highlighted the need to strengthen India's health and social safety nets. This includes investing in public health infrastructure, improving the quality of healthcare services, and ensuring that all citizens have access to basic social services. The government should learn from these experiences and take steps to build a more resilient and inclusive economy for the future.

Bend it like Italy

India needs a comprehensive approach to deal with the COVID-19 pandemic. The government should focus on strengthening its health and social safety nets, improving the quality of healthcare services, and ensuring that all citizens have access to basic social services. It should also implement targeted support measures for the most vulnerable populations, particularly in the rural sector. This includes providing food, financial aid, and job training. The government should also focus on building a more resilient and inclusive economy for the future. This involves investing in public health infrastructure, improving the quality of healthcare services, and ensuring that all citizens have access to basic social services. The government should learn from the experiences of other countries, particularly Italy, and take steps to build a more resilient and inclusive economy for the future.

INTRODUCTION TO ART CRITICISM

Directions: Use the image below to help fill in the blanks for each step of art criticism. The words to choose from are below each paragraph.

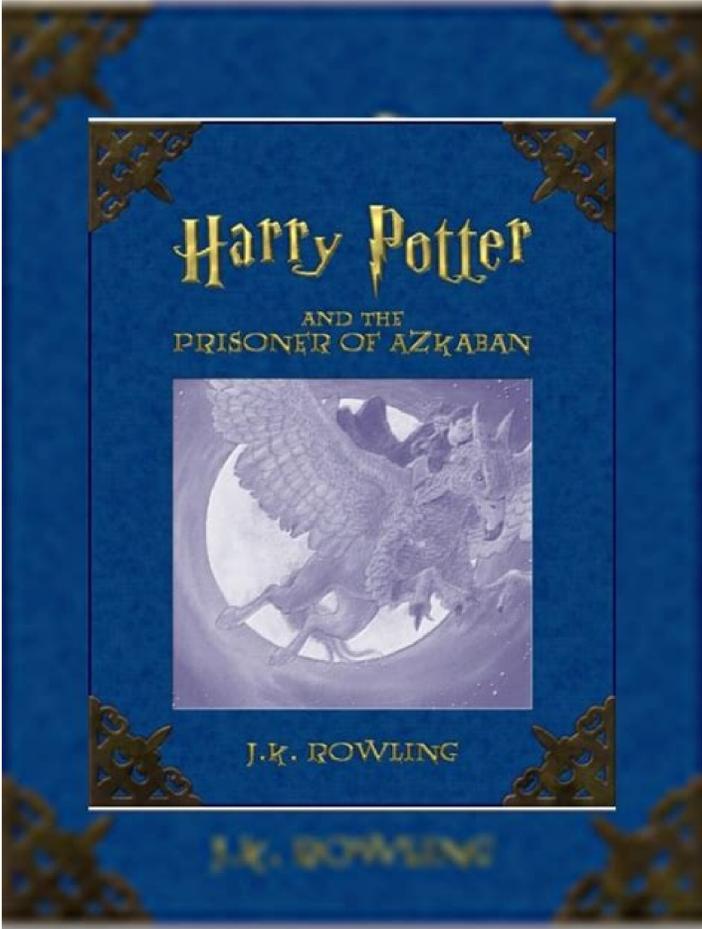

Description: In the description, describe the artwork in great detail, looking at each part of the work of art.

This woodblock print was created by Katsushika Hokusai. It is called The Great Wave off Kanagawa. It shows a large, curling wave about to crash over three small boats in the ocean. In the boats are many tiny figures holding their oars. Each wave has many tiny figures that reach in the direction of the boats. The waves are not curve towards the boats as well. The sky is blank and looks like a background you can see fit, which indicates this painting takes place around Japan.

EMPTY GREAT PLUS FIGURES WAVE

analyze: In the analysis, tell what elements of art & principles of design were used in the picture, where they are used, and how they are used. (Line, shape, space, color, value, texture, form, balance, proportion, unity, emphasis, rhythm, variety)

In this print there are many curving lines used. There are curving stripes on the background which help them look longer. The tiny figures line on the wave point towards the boats.

Recommended Articles This is a guide to Audit Report Format. The standardized audit report format approach helps in easy readability of the audit report by the stakeholders, board of directors, and investors. Conclusion The audit report is a very important document that is issued by the independent auditor. Opinion: This confirms the overall result of auditing the financial statements i.e. whether the opinion is qualified, unqualified, adverse, or disclaimer. Signature of the Auditor: The auditor should sign the audit report in this space. The report is used to the board of directors, investors, shareholders, and other stakeholders of the company. The auditor should be very careful while drafting the audit report and should follow standard format year on year provided there are no changes as per prescribed regulations. The audit report is filed to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) along with the company's audited financial statements. The audit report in a standardized format confirms the integrity and honesty of the management in the preparation and maintenance of the financial records. Introductory paragraph: This heading provides information about the company, the financial statements covered under audit, the period under review, and similar basic information about the financial statements being audited by the auditors. An audit report may not provide analysis to whether the company is good for investment or not or may not provide the analysis of the company's performance for the period but it surely increases the reliability of the financial statements of the company. Definition of Audit Report Format The audit report is a document issued by the independent auditors in which they express their views and opinion regarding the state of financial affairs of the company and it provides conformity concerning the fact that whether the financial statements comply with GAAP (generally accepted accounting principles) or not. The audit report in a standardized format helps the user or stakeholders in knowing the truth and fairness of the financial statements, as it is issued by the independent auditor. Explanation The Audit report is an important piece of document which comments on the final result of the state of financial affairs of the business or the company. The Audit report is prepared according to the standard format as advised by the GAAP. If the auditor provides an unqualified opinion, the auditor would mention the logical reasoning for the same. Management's Responsibility: This heading states that the integrity of the financial statements lies with the management of the company i.e. it is management's responsibility to maintain accounting records to prevent frauds and errors and build sufficient financial controls to ensure the accuracy of the data. Here we also discuss the definition and importance of the audit report along with examples. Here, all the facts relating to the audit procedure should be mentioned. It is a type of letter which is issued by the independent auditors who have performed the audit in the standardized format as advised by GAAP (generally accepted accounting principles). The type of opinion depends upon the audit findings of the auditor and its impact on the overall financial statements. Auditor's Responsibility: This section states that the responsibility of the auditor is to express an unbiased opinion over the state of financial affairs or statements and issue an audit report. It surely helps in increasing the consistency and reliability of the Audit report. Date of the Audit Report: The date on which the audit report is signed should be mentioned. Basis of the Opinion: This heading states the basis on which the audit opinion has been achieved or issued. Any other such responsibility relating to regulatory requirements should be mentioned in this section. You may also have a look at the following articles to learn more - Addressee: The addressee heading should confirm the addressee name/ title to which the report needs to be delivered or sent to such as the investors of the company. Examples of Audit Report Format The basic audit report format is as follows: Title: The title of the Audit report should confirm that it is 'Independent Auditor's report'. The report should always follow the format advised by the regulatory body as it is used by stakeholders, management, investors, banks, and other parties for referring the unbiased view and opinion of the independent auditor over the state of the financial health of the company. The report holds so much importance in the business world because many people trust this very report for getting a clear and honest view of the company's state of financial affairs. Other Reporting Responsibility: When the regulations applicable to an entity requires so, the auditor might be required to report on other matters as well on which the opinion is not expressed in the above section. Importance of Audit Report Format The importance of the audit report format can be understood from the following points. The audit report is published along with the company's annual report. Place of the Signature: The name of the city where the audit report is signed.
