F11Photo / Shutterstock For those who reflect their next Great American Getaway, New York or Los Angeles could be the first cities that come to mind. But why go to a run-of-the-mill trip, when can you aim for an experience that changes life instead? (And while you have it, take a look at the best city in the world!) Our best choice is a little off the beaten path - but it is a favorite crowd. Every year, Condé Nast traveler asks his readers to vote for their favorite cities in America. Over 300,000 respondents participated in this year's annual survey, which included over 30,000 favorite city listings, hotels, cruises, islands and airports. The results revealed over 1,800 travel experiences in the world, and it is on track to receive over 54 million visitors this year. New York, which "buzzes with the energy of a city (of 8.49 million) perpetually caffeinated," ranked according to Condé Nast's list. San Francisco and Honolulu, Hawaii were also among the best choices of readers. Condé Nast Reagents recognize which residents of Chicago have always known: the second city is the best big city in the United States, and the mayor Rahm Emanuel said in a statement. "This title is a testament to the innovation found in our extraordinary architecture, the naivety captured at our award-winning restaurants and 67 breweries, and the congenial character of Chicagoans. While our neighborhoods have unique cultures and features, we are a Chicago, and we are proud of this distinction. (Take a look at the city in America where your car is more likely to be stolen.) It may be known as the "secondary city," but Chicago is the first city in the hearts of readers. Isn't the big cities exactly your thing? These most beautiful small cities in America could make up the trick instead. [Source: Chicago Tribune] Hong Kong is an independent state in China, meaning Hong Kong falls somehow. This happened because the UK transferred the rule of the region to China. Hong Kong is generally self-managed, and has its own currency. Today Hong Kong includes about 382 square miles of land and is home to about 7,113,000, according to estimates since 2014. The City-State consists of the main island of Hong Kong, Stonecutter Island, Kowloon Peninsula and new territories. There are more than 260 islands that make up the state of the city. Some are uninhabited. Language in Hong Kong Most people living in Hong Kong speak Cantonese, which is a language that has nine tones. Some people in the country may speak Mandarin, which uses a completely different alphabet. Also, English. Even one of the official languages of the country. The food at Hong Kong some of the food in Hong Kong are really unforgettable. Dim Sum originated in Hong Kong with a name that means "touching the heart". Originally, Dim Sum was understood as a snack for travelers. Today is a dish that is easy to find throughout the city. Other popular foods found throughout the Hong Kong include pineapple eggs and sandwiches. If you want something a little more luxury, the city also houses a variety of restaurants and chefs with Michelin stars. The economy in Hong Kong Hong Kong is one of the richest cities in the world. An important factor in the local economy is tourism. The city hosted over 41.92 million visitors in 2011. All this helps to make Hong Kong International Airport of the world's most busy airports. Generally, Hong Kong's economy is associated with low taxation, low government intervention and free trade. The city -stood can do many of its decisions, even if it is strongly influenced by China. Made on Hong Kong while many people consider Hong Kong to be a great city with many skyscrapers, about 40% of the city consists of parks and natural preserves. Even in the city, you will find many places to hike. The name of the region has a unique spin. The name of Hong Kong comes from the Chinese words for "fragrant port". The real full name associated with the state of the city is the special administrative region of Hong Kong of the People's Republic of China. Hong Kong has a subtropical climate. Winters are cold and dry, and summers are warm and rainy. The most dried months are January and December, and the more wet months are June and August. 1 Life after Covid-19: how has the public transit changed as a result of the pandemic? 2 What is physical education and why is it important? 3 30 Incredible natural phenomena that must be seen to be believed 4 Homing foods The
