("peas" is the referent and is plural) With fractions, the verb agrees with the whole. Sentence contains both singular and a plural pronoun In this rule of Subject-Verb Agreement, when a sentence contains both singular and a plural pronoun, the verb used will be according to the pronoun closer to the verb. In this statement, the plural noun "friends" is closest to the verb and therefore will be plural i.e., meet. Quiz Your Inner Grammar Nazi With this Grammar Test Rule 6. A plural subject takes a plural verb: The boys are climbing the walls like caged animals. She or I run every day. Potatoes, pasta, or rice goes well with grilled chicken. Go through them, and you are ready to ace any test on subject-verb agreement. Let's begin with the 12 most common and important rules of Subject-Verb Agreement: Subject = underlined Verb = italicized A singular subject goes with a singular verb. The two subjects and verbs must be aligned to ensure agreement. But there is an exception to this rule. Even the comparatively diminutive Grammar Smart devotes five pages (including quizzes) to the topic. Her niche is business/marketing and online. For example, if you use a single subject 'He' then the single verb 'is' would appear- 'He is talking too much. This rule of Subject-Verb Agreement explains that "Do not" is used with the singular pronouns "I" and "You" instead of "does not" as it ideally should be. In this statement, she is singular and therefore, yeh verb does not will be used. In this statement, they is plural and therefore, the verb do not will be used. Exception Incorrect I does not eat ice cream Correct I do not eat ice cream In this statement, I is a singular pronoun but do not will be using along with it instead of does not. The basic rule is that a singular subject takes a singular verb while a plural subject takes a plural verb. Oil, as well as gas, is a popular heating choice. Peanut butter combined with bread and jelly is a tasty snack. (Here, the peanut butter, bread, and jelly are one unit, a sandwich, so no commas are needed and we keep the singular verb.) Collecting noun phrases (a bunch of, a group of, a set of, etc.) take a singular verb. If the subject is singular, the verb will also be singular and it will remain so irrespective of such expressions. In this statement, the subject "Neha" is singular and therefore the verb used is also singular i.e., "is". The verb must always agree with the subject of a sentence. In this statement, They is a plural pronoun and therefore will take on a plural verb i.e., play. Learn all about Active and Passive Voice: Rules & Exercises Rule 3. So, if your aim is to have perfect grammar, you need to memorize the rules that apply when a subject and a verb is put together. Each boy is excited about the meet; each is well prepared. The football team is practicing night and day for the Super Bowl. Boston's school committee disagrees about what to cut from the school budget. Yet, The Copyeditor's Handbook lists no fewer than 25 cases that are not so clear cut, and Garner's Modern American Usage devotes nearly five columns to the topic. The phrase introduced by "as well as" or "along with" modifies the earlier word but doesn't compound the subjects. And then there is the fact that English just refuses to follow its own rules. "None" takes a singular verb if what it refers to is singular and a plural verb if its referent is plural. The phrase accompanied by has no impact on the verb. When the subject follows the verb (especially in sentences beginning with the expletives "there is" or "there are"), special care is needed to determine the subject and to make certain that the verb agrees with it. If in a sentence two or more nouns or pronouns are connected using "or/nor" then the verb used will be singular. In this statement, the two nouns class teacher and principal are connected using "or" and therefore the verb used is singular i.e., sanctions. Rule 5. So, these are the major rules of the subject-verb agreement. (intended sense of singular) When a subject is made up of nouns joined by or, the verb agrees with the last noun. One thing that confuses writers is a long, complicated subject. In this statement, "each one" is used and therefore, the singular verb "is" will be used. In this statement, "neither" is used and therefore, the singular verb "is" will be used. Mass nouns like civics, mathematics, dollars, measles, and news which cannot be counted use singular verbs under the rules of Subject-Verb Agreement. The writer gets lost in it and forgets which noun is actually the head of the subject phrase and instead makes the verb agree with the nearest noun: Incorrect: The arrival of new fall fashions have excited all the back-to-school shoppers. Correct: The arrival of new fall fashions has excited all the back-to-school shoppers. (should be has to agree with arrival) Another trap for writers is the move away from strict grammatical agreement toward "notional agreement," that is, the verb agrees with the notion or idea the subject is trying to convey, whether it is singular or plural: Incorrect: Twenty-five rules is a lot to digest. Correct: Twenty-five rules are listed on the notice. ("books" is a plural noun) One-fourth of the sand is white. She and I run every day. Peanut butter and jelly is my favorite sandwich.
